PROFILE

Sophie focuses her practice on complex civil litigation, employment disputes, and white collar and criminal defense.

Sophie has worked on two high-stakes civil trials, most recently helping a foreign plaintiff secure a victory in an international asset tracing and recovery litigation.

In her pro bono practice, Sophie represents indigent clients at every stage of federal criminal proceedings.

During law school, Sophie was a board member and competitor of the Brendan Moore Trial Advocacy Center. Additionally, she interned in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York and the Civil Division of the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of New York.

Sophie is fluent in Spanish and Russian.
