PROFILE

Philip Eckert specializes in intellectual property litigation, handling cases that involve intricate technical issues and substantial financial stakes. He has a diverse range of experience, from securing a multimillion-dollar jury verdict for a startup tech company to representing Fortune 500 companies in patent and trade secret disputes. Phil also advises small businesses on managing and protecting their intellectual property portfolios.

Phil's background as a founder of a software startup before transitioning into IP litigation gives him a unique perspective in the courtroom and a comprehensive understanding of the challenges faced by today's innovators.

In addition to his professional practice, Phil is committed to pro bono work. He has successfully helped families obtain asylum in the United States and supported low-income communities in addressing issues related to vacant and abandoned housing.
