Michael represents both plaintiffs and defendants in a wide range of matters in state and federal courts, including complex commercial litigation, class actions, and intellectual property.

While in law school, Michael worked as a certified law student in the Civil Rights Litigation Clinic and Community and Economic Development Clinic. There, he represented clients in matters ranging from victims tortured by a government official, police brutality, and data collection privacy claims to assisting low-income residents in the acquisition of a mobile home park. Additionally, Michael served as a judicial extern in the Orange County Superior Court and was active in University of California, Irvine's pro bono program.
