Jacob represents plaintiffs and defendants in high-stakes trial and appellate litigation, as well as regulatory matters. His practice spans complex commercial disputes, constitutional law, government regulation, antitrust, and class actions. His experience in government and his federal judicial clerkship provide a valuable perspective on litigation strategy and regulatory challenges.

Before joining the firm, Jacob served as a law clerk to the Hon. Benjamin Beaton at the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Kentucky. He also gained valuable experience during law school as an extern with the U.S. Attorney’s Office in New Haven and as a research assistant to Professor Jed Rubenfeld, where he aided in high-stakes First Amendment and constitutional litigation from the district court to the U.S. Supreme Court.
